Gentlemen.

I desire to draw your attention to the fact that the library rule re bespoken books is not being observed by the caretaker of the library viz: Miss Burford.

I received from a friend on Saturday last. a book entitled "The Mysterious Rider" - Lane Grey and did not know at the time that this was a bespoken book. Miss Burford knowing that I had the book referred the matter to Mr. Bunker and instead of leaving the matter with him caused a nasty scene with me which I greatly object to.

Another lady who had received the book entitled "The Golden Apple" - K. Rhodes and who had not bespoken the book was allowed to take it and I understand that this book is much more bespoken than "The Mysterious Rider". I desire to adhere strictly to the rules of the library but why is it that one person can take a bespoken book which was not bespoken by this person and I am victimised. I know for a
