Cathedral which, then L. S. Pierce & L. S. Mearns & back the last. I left again at 10.30 with my camera. I took some photos of the W & N porches & then was inside. The west-clerian Henry is the head of Jean des Coziers - on the first pillar of the nave on the N. side. about 18 feet up. It was an "arrow" in the middle age was very beautiful in the window. Christ above. The last name was Pierre de Congreves. He appears also in Notre Dame de Paris & the Cathedral of Amiens. The altar stone pillars in the nave are double which appear again in Canterbury, both being built by Guillaume de Sens. A fine example of the Salomon family 1573: In the N. transept the XII century Chapel of S. Jean Baptiste, the <sup>Chapel</sup> Chapel of N. transept XII century glass. The Trisul is one of the finest in France. a 18th cent. Ivory pyx VIII cent. Canopy. a Christ in cradle XIV XV XVI cent. Copied in the V. transept of S. Thomas of Canterbury. I got a plan of the transept of S. Thomas & of S. Thomas in the island got back for lunch. I had lunch at the museum but had no time.

I caught the 3.10 to Paris & got in 4.45 & took an auto to the house & walked to Bureau got some maps & then saw and to the Gare d'Orléans & walked to the Gare de Nord got dinner at the Restaurant à l'Espérance & caught the 8.5. via Dunkerque - a very calm crossing.

Nov 23 got London 7.30 & found my luggage bag had been sent to Southampton, gave my bag to the Customs House, went to the Club & the stores & caught the 11.20 from King's Cross & walked up from the station at Harlow also. My bag arrived at 2.5.

A very fine trip, the weather was fine but I would change that & go again at the same time if I had the chance as the Archæology colony was so fine.
