Passes thru the middle Range, all subalpine.

As said before the Hells-Clear Divide is a divide running from the passes thru the range, across basins and small valleys about 6,000 ft. above sea level.

The Hells described at the foot of the Divide was a few hundred feet above sea level & the Clear & Gauley are all lower.

These middle ranges can be crossed in many places, for draw as well as passes. All passes are about the same height - a little above sea level.

Hidden Falls Saddle.

Well defined about same height as Parry's Cut about 6 miles S. of P.

Saddle nears of flanks of Big Bellies which was part of the main divide.

I have never been up it, but judge it just as well above 6,000 feet elevation.

It leads into Fall Creek a few miles below Hells Ford from the same probably slope. May be combined with Parry's pass.

Mr. Richard Pass. (? Ridderi)

On a spur N. of Collins Creek, Gauley River, S. end - east side Cascade. Part-party sheep travelling party among broken hillsides & the shoulder of Mr. Richard. There are no open sheep.

An admirable short cut over the Olearie Range, about 6 miles in all.

^{Two main passes.}

Another pass west to Cascade lies up the Collins Creek

& up Lemonas Creek west to Jackson on both ways.

Moreschi Pass.

Two well defined passes are east side of Mt. Shucka from the Moreschi to Clark's River. Both nearly cross bed travelling on the Clark's side, but crossing & cutting slopes on the Moreschi side. Numerous streams on the ridge? did the Indians travel over these? here?

Otto Pass

Between the Clark R. & the Otto branch of the Parries. 4400 ft. a.s.l.

In Glaciation Mt. Hooker which flows E. & W. fills the saddle. But a good road goes from the river down to the Clark 100 ft. above the pass passes. The road up from the Clark is going now, or is good when can be taken.
