

On Page 85. There is the name Frankish which I crossed out but that he did preach, was vouched for by father, who said that on one occasion, just as he was about to begin the sermon, the folks in the pew, sat themselves at ease to listen, where (the preacher) said: "Don't go to sleep yet I haven't got started". He had a brother who was an Auctioneer, went by name of Kit Frankish. Henry & Fred Overton, were on the plan as readers, and there was another class, beside the Locals, who were on the plan as "Exhorters".

Of J. S. Wilson, He had the peculiarity of being able to lower his brows very much, & make contortions, even to the extent of being able to move one ear forward something like you have seen a cow doing. (Legendary)
